Hello Carson. Welcome to Desnudo Magazine UK! How old are you, where are you from?

I am 22 years old and from Lagrange, Georgia

What is your heritage/ethnic background?

White/Caucasian

How did you get into modeling?

I just sent in pictures to agencies in Atlanta and got the email to meet with one and was signed.

Who is your hero?

I guess my hero would have to be my dad. He's done so much for me and he's honestly my best friend.

If you could live anywhere, where would it be?

My hometown Lagrange with my family.

What makes you laugh the most?

My best friends.

What was the last movie you went to? What did you think?

Avengers Infinity War, and it was dope. Marvel is my favorite

What did you want to be when you were small?

Pro baseball/football player

If you could choose to do anything for a day, what would it be?

I would really like to drive a bunch of different expensive cars around a track.

What is your favorite game or sport to watch and play?

Definitely baseball

Would you rather ride a bike, ride a horse, or drive a car?

Drive a car 100%

What would you sing at Karaoke night?

"I Like It I Love It" by Tim McGraw. One because it is a great song. Two because I only did karaoke one time in my life when I was four years old at a wedding and it was to that song.

Have you ever had a nickname? What is it?

My friends call me "Mad Man."

How would your friends describe you?

I would like to imagine they would say I'm a really good friend. They'd probably say I'm funny and wild.

Where do you see yourself in five years?

5 years is a long time so I really don't have an answer. But let's hope it's somewhere great

GUCCI

IT'S 33 degrees in Florence but it should come as no surprise that the city's most spectacular hardest-to-get-into cultural venues aren't air conditioned. But Lallo, aka Alessandro Michele, won't let a heatwave deter him from presenting fur hats and mink coats as part of his resort line up this evening - and making it all seem like a very viable option to boot.

But before the show, festivities here in Gucci's hometown began with a private tour of the Vasari corridor, the strip that runs across the top of the Ponte Vecchio arched bridge (which was once used as a private gateway for Royals to scuttle through, unnoticed). Overlooking the Arno river, show-goers were treated to a private viewing of Renaissance masterpieces. The tour stretched from the Uffizi Gallery through to the Buontalenti Cave and Boboli Gardens. (Of course, it helps to get the keys to these buildings when you're investing €2 million over the course of three years to fund the restoration; remember Fendi's investment in Rome's Trevi Fountain allowed the house to stage its couture show there in July last year).

And so it was to the Palatine Gallery at Pitti Palace where Michele decided to present his glorious collection. Like all the others before this one, it was a smorgasbord of paisley patterned silk, floral velvet, paintbox-coloured lace, and just about every other colour and fabric from tweed to brocade that you can fathom.

Michele is a crowd pleaser, on multiple levels. He made the clever move not to stray from the aesthetic he made his debut with, moreover, to just pile more on top of it, more layers, more colour, more, more, more. He knows what his girl wants and he delivers in spades.

He even extends his slogans beyond a season, meaning if you bought that cardigan or sweatshirt emblazoned with Love Is Blind, you'll be pleased to know it isn't a one season wonder; the mantra popped up again here tonight (along with 'Guccy' and 'Guccification' slogans).

But it's this approach which makes him a refreshingly rare breed, also, in the way he has always preferred an all-access approach to his backstage format as opposed to a rigorous screening process by burly security.

Take tonight for example, later at his cocktail party staged at Serre Torrigiani he wasn't cordoned off behind a velvet rope, but was to be found crouched on the grass amongst other guests watching Beth Ditto perform, and just like them, he held his iPhone in the air to record the moment. And remember last season, when he stepped out in a Gucci baseball cap with his name embroidered on the side? Gucci fans went nuts. The welcome gift in editors suites this afternoon? Their very own bespoke cap, just like Lallo's.

KPOP ARTIST YOU OUTTA KNOW

BTS

The seven-member boy band BTS — which used to stand for Bangtan Sonyeondan, but now represents the more English-friendly phrase “Beyond the Scene” — is one of music’s biggest social media phenomena, claiming a global fanbase that they call “Army” with more than 12 million Twitter followers who regularly get BTS-related topics trending globally on the platform with thousands of tweets. That fanbase kept BTS atop the Billboard Social charts for all but seven weeks in 2017, besting pop stars like Justin Bieber and setting records. It also won the boys — RM, Jin, Suga, J-Hope, Jimin, V and Jungkook, if you’re keeping track — the Top Social Artist title at last year’s Billboard Music Awards, and propelled their latest album release to debut at No. 7 on the albums charts, a major feat for K-pop.

Behind all of this momentum is the music and allure of BTS, who debuted in 2013 and have only been growing in popularity since. Their appeal is rooted in their upbeat onstage energy and their distinctive personalities, with each committed to staying abreast of social media feeds regularly. The music of BTS leans toward hip-hop with a melodic backbone, featuring collaborations with artists like top global DJ Steve Aoki and rapper Designer. And then there are the music videos: lavishly produced and high-concept, they showcase each of the boys in fashion-forward looks — and show off their sharp dancing skills.

RED VELVET

Founded in 2014, the five-member girl group Red Velvet is known for making both pop and, unusually, R&B-inspired jams, deviating from most of their counterparts. Their slinkier soul sound (think: Ariana Grande times five), offset by dance-ready tunes like the peppy “Dumb Dumb,” has attracted a primarily female fanbase, and indicates a smart choice to appeal to multiple genre audiences. Plus, they’re racking up industry cred by working with producers like The Stereotypes, who were also behind the Bruno Mars Grammy-winning blockbuster “That’s What I Like.” 2017 album Perfect Velvet topped the Billboard World Albums chart, and a repackaged release for 2018 sees them continue to chart this year — with plenty more to come
